

US Census Population Report

Population Overview

According to the fictional 2020 census dataset used for this demonstration, the United States population was 331.0 million people. California was the most populous state with 39.5 million residents, followed by Texas with 29.1 million and Florida with 21.5 million.

The national population grew by 7.4% between 2010 and 2020. The population of California grew by 6.1%, Texas by 15.9%, and Florida by 14.6% during the same period.